

Trikuta: An Archeological View

DNA samples revealed that Hindu (DNA F) lived only in Peninsular India for over 60,000 years. At that time, much of the world was covered with glaciers, and the seawater was far below the current levels. The original homelands of the F are now submerged. The F were forced to relocate to an area in the Vindhyas called Trikuta with an inexhaustible supply of rainwater. They moved to the Trikuta 20,000 years ago.

The F at the Trikuta were three subgroups: H, J2b, and O. The H lived along the Hiran tributary of the Narmada. The J2b lived along the Ken. The O lived along the Sone. They independently reached the Trikuta from different directions by following perennial rainwater rivers to their headwaters. They met at the Trikuta. They lived in peace and tranquility as siblings for 20,000 years until they were forced to move to the east to the Mahanadi River by climatic change.

The rivers Hiran, Ken, and Sone originated at the foot of a hill.

Grandhika was the language of the J2b. The original Grandhika Ramayana was composed by the J2b as a cultural anthropology of the three cultures at the Trikuta.

The extant Sanskrit Ramayana is a fictional story of the forbidden culture of some unethical and immoral Avestans (South Bactria), called Brahmins (Z93), who were kicked out of Avesta.

The Greeks deliberately employed the unethical Brahmin to write the Sanskrit Ramayana to destroy the ancient Hindu civilization.

Culturally, the Sanskrit Ramayana was the exact opposite of the Grandhika Ramayana. The excavated Grandhika Ramayana provided us rich archeological data on the Hindus that lived at the Trikuta for 20,000 years.

The three cultures were aware of each other and shared the common core values of the parent F. They were the native Hindus. Unfortunately, the Hindu civilization is now lost.

The Greeks entered the Trikuta around 500 CE, after the collapse of the Gupta empire. They employed the delusional, unethical, and immoral Avestan Brahmins who were kicked out of Avesta to invent fictional stories of fictional temple gods. The Greek-financed, Brahmin-invented Sanskrit rubbish was actively promoted as the ancient Hindu civilization. Temples, Sanskrit, and Brahmin were Greek inventions. Hindus were Asian Homo Sapiens, not European or African Homo Sapiens. Greeks and their Brahmin stooges were European Homo Sapiens who entered India only after Alexander.
