

Hindu Dialects as Recorded in the 2011 Census

The 2011 Census recorded more than 2,000 dialects of various sizes currently in use in India. A dialect evolved naturally to facilitate communications within a genetically distinct group. Each dialect is a different DNA subgroup. Languages were man-made with artificial rules of syntax and grammar to facilitate communication across a group of dialects living in a geographic location; they carry no genetic information. Only the dialects, not languages, are DNA samples. To understand the ancient Indian history, we should filter out languages and focus on natural dialects.

Hindus, DNA F, lived on the west side of the Satpura Ridge along the Narmada, Ken, and Sone rivers in an area called Trikuta for over 20,000 years. The DNA O, J2b, H, and L are subgroups of the parent F. Around 4,000 years ago, the monsoon winds reversed direction, and the west side turned into a wasteland with no rains. All the people were forced to move to the east side of the Satpura that turned from a wasteland to fertile land.

The following map is a distribution of some of the native Hindu dialects as recorded in the 2011 Census. They are natural dialects, not synthetic languages. Languages are represented by white space.
